Can you make a million dollars?

Many of us dream about becoming rich. We'd like a big house, an expensive car, and vacations in beautiful hotels. But how can we make those dreams a reality? Well, I made my first million dollars before I was thirty—and you can, too. Here's what you should do.

Use your strengths

Too many people choose a career for the wrong reasons. They want to be a lawyer because lawyers can make a lot of money. But they don't like reading—and lawyers need to read a lot! You won't be happy if you have to do something you don't like every day. So know your strengths and use those skills to improve your opportunities.

Work for yourself

If you'd like to make money, don't work for someone else. Your employer is always the person who makes money. At the start of your career, it's OK to work for someone to get experience. But as soon as you can, start your own business. That way, you can make more money.

Think big!

Always make plans that are a little more difficult than you think you can do. You have to challenge yourself. If you always make safe choices and don't take chances, you're not going to make your dreams come true. For example, I decided to make $100,000 the aim for my first year in business. That was a big goal, but I did it in six months!

Educate yourself

It's great to get an education at a university, but never stop learning: read books, do online courses, and learn about subjects that can help you in your business. A good businessperson needs to know more than their competitors—other people that want your customers.

Never give up

Don't stop doing something because it's difficult. There are times in your career when you think, "I can't do this!" But a successful businessperson is the one who finds a way to solve the problem. The unsuccessful ones just give up.

Now go and find a way to make your first million dollars!
