Everyone Loves a Farmer's Market!What is a farmers' market?

Farmers sell to stores and supermarkets. At a farmers' market, farmers sell their food to people like us. Many farmers' markets are outdoors. They are not there every day, but one or two times a week.

What kind of foods do farmers' markets sell?

Many farmers sell fresh fruit and vegetables. But some sell food that they prepare, like cakes, desserts, sauces, and cooked meats. Some sell drinks, too.

NAME: _____

DATE: _____

Are farmers' markets popular?

Yes, they are! There are more and more every year. There are now around 10,000 farmers' markets in the US each year. That is about 8,000 more than in 1994.

Why do people like farmers' markets?

People like them because they can buy food from the farmers. They know the fruit and vegetables are fresh. Many farmers sell organic food. That means they don't use chemicals when they grow the food. Lots of people think that is better than supermarket food.

Why do farmers like them?

Supermarkets buy fruit and vegetables from farmers at a very low price. Farmers like to sell to people like us because they can sell at higher prices. They can get extra money for some of the food they produce.

Are there any disadvantages to farmers' markets?

The fruit and vegetables at farmers' markets are expensive, but many people think it is better than supermarket food because it is fresher. On the other hand, some people think food from farmers' markets is dangerous. We don't know how people make their cooked foods. We know the food in supermarkets is safe. However, most of the time food from farmers' markets is healthy, safe, and delicious. That's why farmers' markets are so popular.
