Section 5: Reading

Read the magazine travel column. Then choose the correct words to complete the sentences.

The world of travel is changing

This week we're looking at how technology is changing travel. These days, it's easy to get around large towns and cities. You want to get from your office to a meeting on the other side of town? Touch and open an app on your phone—one that helps you find a car and driver to take you on short trips around the city. Five minutes later, your driver is in front of the building. She has great reviews from other passengers. The reviews say that the driver is safe and friendly, so you feel safe. You get in the car and have a friendly conversation with her. At your destination, you give her a five-star review, too. It's so much easier than a bus, and cheaper than a taxi.

Apps on your phone can help you travel.

Or how about this: You want to get from a train station to meet a friend in a different neighborhood. Outside the station there are thirty electric bikes. You open an app on your phone to take one of the bikes to go across town to meet your friend. But you don't need the bike again. So you open the app, tell it that you're finished, and leave the bike outside the café. The ride costs one dollar. Five minutes later, another person picks up the bike to go somewhere else.

But what if you want to travel a longer distance? You want to go from Los Angeles to San Francisco—that's a six-hour drive. Is that as easy as traveling in the city? Is it cheap? Well, you don't want to take an electric bike so many miles because it is too far. You don't want to use the kind of car app you used for trips around the city. They are too pricey—around $1,500! Also, drivers in cities don't want to travel that far. If you don't want to rent a car, what can you do? Well, you can get a ride with other people going to San Francisco. There are apps that help you meet these people. You just pay a part of the cost of travel and make friends on the way! I did that trip to San Francisco last week and I paid $15. I had a great time!
