Section 5: ReadingRead the article. Then choose the correct answers to complete the statements.*Going shopping?

Well, where do you want to go? Do you want to buy your shirts, purses, or pants at a department store or a street market? I know which kind of place I prefer.

You know what you're getting in a department store. Every department store sells all the familiar brands. If you want some running shoes, you know that there is a department with the same big brands that you can find at every department store. You can also find a tablet, furniture, or luggage—whatever you need, it's all there under one roof. And that's what it is, it is all under a roof. Whatever the weather is like outside—wind, rain or snow—you can stay dry and warm inside one big store. They are the most comfortable places to go shopping. There are nice restaurants and coffee shops when you want to rest or relax with friends. But the problem with department stores is that they're so boring! It's because they have all the same brands of clothes, furniture, and devices and look the same. The coffee shops are the same and the restaurants are the same. That's not true for street markets.

Street markets are fun! You never know what you will find at a street market because each one is different. They may sell the big brand running shoes, but they also sell other brands, too. Sometimes these brands look the same as the big brands, but they're half the price! They sell devices, luggage, and clothes just like the department stores. But they sell many other things, too. Some of the people even make the products themselves and sell them. So you can buy lamps and soaps and clothes, for example, that nobody else sells. Street markets may not have restaurants, but they have stalls that sell the best food and you can talk to the people who make it. The people who sell things at street markets can be a lot of fun. They can tell you about the food or the clothes that they sell. They might even give you a better price for them.

So, the next time you think about a shopping trip, decide if you want the same boring experience you always have. Or if you want something that's interesting, different and fun!

30. Which statement expresses the writer's main idea?

- a. Street markets are more interesting than department stores.
- b. Street markets have better bargains.
- c. Department stores are more comfortable than street markets.

31. When something is "familiar," you _____.

- a. don't know it well
- b. know it well
- c. want it
