Section 5: Reading Part ARead the article. Then choose True, False, or No information.Who doesn't like pop-up restaurants?*What is a pop-up restaurant?

Pop-up restaurants are restaurants that open for a short time and then close again. A pop-up restaurant opens for a day, a week, or a month—it usually depends on how successful they are. They often open in unusual places, like on top of a building, a tent, or an old train. A pop-up restaurant could open anywhere! Some pop-up restaurants only sell one kind of food. It could be a specific entrée, or dishes that only contain fruits and vegetables from a specific country. There are even pop-restaurants that only sell desserts!

Why do people open pop-up restaurants?

There are many reasons. Young chefs sometimes open pop-up restaurants to let people try their food. If their food is really good, they can become famous! Some people do it because it's cheaper than having a usual restaurant. It means they can sell top notch food at affordable prices. For others, it's a fun and interesting way to work.

Why do people go to pop-up restaurants?

Many pop-up restaurants sell unusual food, so people want to try it. But it's also exciting to eat in an unusual place! When many people are talking on social media about a new pop-up restaurant, lots of people want to visit it, too. This can be very exciting!

What are some disadvantages of pop-up restaurants?

You usually can't book over the phone or on the internet like for regular restaurants. You just have to go there and hope there is a table for you. Because they are so popular over a very short time, pop-up restaurants are very busy. So you may never be able to eat there. And when you get a table, there may be nothing on the menu that you actually like!

Section 5: Reading Part B

Read the article. Then choose the correct answers to the questions.

Buying clothes for a friend?

Do you like buying clothes for friends? Maybe you see a shirt in the store and think your best friend would really love it. You can imagine how she is going to look in the shirt. So you buy it as a gift and you think that she'll be very happy with her surprise. That sounds nice, doesn't it? But be careful! Buying clothes for other people can be a big challenge. The biggest problem is size. It's difficult to buy the right size clothing for yourself. But when you buy for someone else, it can be near impossible! If you don't know your friend's size, you have to guess. What if you guess wrong? And even when you know their size, you still have to remember that a size medium in one store may not be the same as a size medium in another store. It's always better to try clothes before you buy them—to put them on and see if they fit well. If you buy clothes for a friend, you don't know if it will be the best fit for them!

Another problem is that you may not really know their taste in clothes. Sure, you see what they wear every day, but is that the same as choosing an item of clothing for them? Do you know if they like the color or the style? Do they really want another shirt? Or maybe you buy something that they think is inappropriate. The clothes could be too conservative or too liberal. These are all things you need to think about.

So, does it mean you shouldn't buy clothes as a gift for friends? Well, not always. Maybe you shouldn't buy them clothes that may not fit. But you can still buy them some accessories like a nice purse—especially if you know that they love purses! And if they don't like it, they can always take it back to the store and exchange it for something they really like. Or you can buy a completely different gift—chocolate is usually a good idea!
