

They aren't just teens. They're the future!

1

Their organisation – Bye Bye Plastic Bags

Melati and Isabel Wijsen are sisters, and they are teenagers. They're from Bali, an island in Indonesia. Is it possible for two young girls to help change the world? Yes, it is! These sisters have got their own organisation for young people, Bye Bye Plastic Bags, and they say no to plastic bags.

Every year, the two sisters clean up plastic and rubbish on beaches and streets with volunteers. Over 20,000 people are with them on one clean-up in Bali! The organisation isn't big, but it's in over 25 locations around the world.

Yes, they're young, but they can change things. Say 'no' to plastic bags in your country!

2

His invention – Gimkit

This is Josh Feinsilber. He's from the US and he's the inventor of Gimkit, an online quiz app. It's for teachers and students. The teachers write questions in an online quiz. Then the students answer the quiz questions and get awards. Millions of students in 100 countries now use Gimkit at school and at home. Is it difficult to make an app? Well, yes, it is and no, it isn't! The teachers using the app answer questions, like 'Are you happy with the app?' 'Is this colour ok or is this date ok?' And these students and teachers are wonderful. They've got many good ideas. Then the Gimkit team make small changes in the app. His mum, dad, sister and brother all help him. They're great. Oh, and his dog! He barks at him when he's on the computer for too long!