

Smart and cosy Cambridge house

Smart, modern, but cosy 3-bedroom house in a friendly neighbourhood on the outskirts of Cambridge, with easy access to city centre, and rail station to London.

The space

The space is a well-kept 3-bedroom house [] and a nice cosy lived-in feel. The living room has a large, comfortable sofa and armchair, and a nice oak coffee table with bookshelves above it (feel free to read anything you like, and enjoy our CD collection!). There's a TV [] for streaming films and catch-up TV (the Wi-fi is fast and reliable). Best of all, for winter visits, there's an open fireplace [] .

The living room runs through into a dining room [redacted] . Both rooms have beautiful wooden floors with rugs. The kitchen is rather small, but has nice modern fittings. At the end of the dining room, the French windows open into a small conservatory, [redacted] . There are two bedrooms, one with a double bed, and the other with twin beds. The third bedroom is used as a study.

Neighbourhood

The house is in a quiet, friendly neighbourhood. Our immediate neighbours on the left are a retired elderly couple [redacted] if we can't be contacted. In the house on the right, there's a nice young couple [redacted] , so if you have children they could make some new friends!

There's a corner shop about five minutes' walk away, [redacted] . The nearest supermarket is within walking distance, about 15 minutes, and it's only a short bus ride to Cambridge city centre, and the rail station, [redacted] .
